

Eric Hunn, Esq. (Chair) is the Vice President of People for Premier Nutrition (PowerBar & Premier Protein). He has served in various governmental roles, including as an Assistant District Attorney, White House Office of Management and Budget policy expert working on Justice Department and Homeland Security issues, and serving with the U.S. Department of State's Diplomatic Security Service. Mr. Hunn holds both Juris Doctor and Master of Public Administration degrees from Syracuse University and a bachelor's degree from the University of California, Los Angeles. He served as a youth member of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Commissions in the early 1990s and rejoined the Commission in 2014. He lives in Lafayette with his wife and two young sons and is a den leader with the Cub Scouts.

Dr. Shirley Lorenz (Vice Chair) recently retired after 30 years as a school psychologist in the Dublin Unified School District, where she worked with children ages four through eighteen. She has also been an instructor at UC Berkeley and St. Mary's College, teaching classes in basic measurement and assessment as well as child development. During her career, she has served as a site supervisor for many school psychologist interns. Ms. Lorenz holds a Ph. D. from UC Berkeley. Her interest in juvenile justice developed while working with adolescents in a continuation high school. She hopes to continue advocating for the educational opportunities, services and resources available to at-risk youth. Ms. Lorenz lives in Lafayette with her husband and has a daughter living in Oregon.

Jamie Miller is a retired public health advisor for the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. During her 37-year career she has worked as an advocate for incarcerated individuals and their medical and mental health care needs through city, county, state and federal health and correctional professionals across the country. She holds an MPH from Emory University, has lectured and published articles regarding public health in corrections and, for several years, was a member of the National Commission on Correctional Health Care's Juvenile Committee who provides guidance for health care standards for incarcerated youth as well as other policy issues. She has served on the Contra Costa County Juvenile Justice Commission for nearly 15 years. Since her retirement, she has volunteered as a writing coach at Richmond High School in Richmond where she lives with her husband of 30 years. She also volunteers as a docent at the Rosie the Riveter National Park and as the annual dinner co-chair and development committee member for the Rosie the Riveter National Trust

Karl Livengood is a retired Licensed Clinical Social Worker who migrated to California in 1962 to work with street gangs in the Mission District of San Francisco. He later worked as a family and group therapist in Marin County, and subsequently directed a day center for adult mentally challenged and mentally ill clients located in Trinity County. He followed his interest in youth to volunteer at the Orin Allen Youth Rehabilitation as a senior tutor (mentor) and more recently has initiated and coordinated the Fine Arts Program at Orin Allen staffed by volunteers from the Rossmoor community and the Mt. Diablo Unitarian-Universalist Church in Walnut Creek. He has a deep commitment to all youth especially those involved in the Justice System.

Harvey Samuels is a retired school teacher and businessman. He is a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley with degrees in education and business/economics. He taught for many years in the inter-city schools serving on committees to improve the lives of the residents. Mr. Samuels is presently serving his second term on the Commission. He has been married for 48 years and has three children and seven grandchildren. He lives in a retirement center and volunteers as a senior tutor at the OAYRF.

Suzanne Heim-Bowen has worked in education for over 30 years as a school psychologist and a special education teacher for students with severe behavior disorders, autism, intellectual delays, learning disabilities and significant mental health issues. She has been an instructor at Cal State East Bay, teaching classes for prospective school psychologists in the assessment of students with severe needs. Ms. Heim-Bowen holds a M.S. degree in Special Education from Dominican University and M.S. in Clinical Child Psychology and Counseling from Cal State East Bay. Ms. Heim-Bowen became interested in the education of students in court and community schools while working for Contra Costa County Office of Education as a school psychologist at Orin Allen Youth Rehabilitation Center and at Contra Costa Juvenile Hall. Since her retirement she continues to be involved in education as a field supervisor for Brandman University and is a Licensed Educational Psychologist.

Dr. Toby Hopstone has over 30 years of experience in education, as a teacher and administrator. Currently she consults for the Contra Costa County Office of Education as an administrative leadership coach, and for individual districts on program issues in special education, restorative practices, and leadership. Dr. Hopstone has served as an adjunct at Saint Mary's College of California, Holy Names University, and SFSU. She has a B.S. from Buffalo State College in New York, a M.S. in Special Education from Brooklyn College, (CUNY), and a doctorate in Educational Leadership from Saint Mary's College.

Diane Sprouse has spent her career primarily in the non-profit and public sectors serving as the executive director of a housing counseling agency in Contra Costa for 5 years, and as an analyst with the Federal Home Loan Bank. Subsequently, she worked at UC Berkeley for 16 years before retiring in 2016. She was a member and later president of the Board of Directors of the Mount Diablo Community Childcare Advocates preschool (now known as Kidango). She is an appointed member of Concord's Measure Q Commission, and is a Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA). She has an MPA from Cal State East Bay.

Dr. Talia Moore is a college professor at Holy Names University, and Faculty Chair of the Criminology Department. In addition, she is a business owner, self-published author and poet, and forensic researcher specializing in criminal justice, law enforcement culture and community and client engagement. Dr. Moore has over a decade of law enforcement experience. As a Deputy Probation Officer, she supervised juveniles, adults, felony drug offenders and the significantly mentally ill. Dr. Moore received her B.A. in Social Welfare from the University of California, Berkeley, with a concentration in Psychology and a minor in African-American Studies, earned her M.A. in Psychology from Golden Gate University, and her Ed.D. in Counseling Psychology and Forensics from Argosy University American School of Professional Psychology.

Dr. Alana Russaw is the program manager for Centerforce Youth Court and a contract therapist with Community Violence Solutions. She has served on numerous boards related to criminal justice and mental health. Dr. Russaw holds a doctorate in clinical psychology, a Master's in Public Health and a Bachelor of Science in Cellular and Molecular Biology. She was chosen to participate in the Contra Costa County Community Academy in 2018. She lives in Concord with her fiancée and toddler son.